[Participant] : soory - no Mic!

[Participant] : OK, great. thank you. What I see is a bunch of narrow tech bros who want to play in a technology sandbox, have fun building cool tools, while others want to make a lot of money - the venture capitalist folks. (Yes, used to work with lot of tech people, and yes I admit I'm biased. Was also married to one).

[Participant] : I hope we can revert to connection, love and nature.

about your story of your life that you mentioned about. Do we will have your biography will come out soon ?

[Participant] : Is there a link for his talk at DU?

[Participant] : Marcus and I had an English prof at Concordia who always said when reading a novel that we should look for the "inner, hidden, deeper, secret meaning..." Unfortunately it took me over 30 years when I found the books of Marcus and Karen Armstrong, etc. to realize that those words apply to the Bible as well. Now I can add Caputo to that list of mind expanding literature.

[Participant] : I am deeply grateful for Dr. Caputo's work and heart! I really believe humanity will be looking back on his work as prophetic, as well as empowering, for the restoration of a more humane, deeply human and "religionless", Christianity. He's still heretical on many "Christian" platforms/communities. But as the Gen Z (and succeeding generations) rebuild a more humane society, I think Dr. Caputo's insights will inform a healthy evolving Christianity. Or maybe we just disseminate his books (like Chic tracts) everywhere now :)

[Participant] : Send tp all of us

[Participant] : Is the recording public?? I'd love to see it.

[Participant] : Me too

[Participant] : Replying to "Marcus and I had an ..."

[Participant] : So lovely to hear you all! The "trumpist" Christianity is what create a lot of prejudices here I Scandinavia. But we are trying to give better perspectives.

[Participant] : thank you!
